From International Shoe to Washington shoe, the changing landscape of personal jurisdiction in copyright claims. For years, intellectual property holders have been fighting a losing battle against infringement both at home and abroad. Intellectual property is the second largest export in the United States and a major contributor to the U.S. economy as a whole. Many people are familiar with names such as Microsoft, Amazon, Corbis Images, Getty Images, Adobe, and Google, all of which have offices here in Washington State, but few people know what happens when their copyrights are infringed out-side Washington State.
