Wartime (The McKenna Chronicles) Heidi Peaster

It is 1918 and the War to End all Wars is coming to a close. In Dooley, as in small towns all over the United States, men are marching off to war, including from the McKenna family. No one, least of all the Dooley recruits, will have any idea what a war in the twentieth century will be like. Neither the ones who fight, nor the ones left behind can possibly foresee what the far reaching consequences of that war will be. In this, the fourth of the McKenna Chronicles, the brothers, cousins, husbands, and sons are caught up in the conflict, while their families are left to wait and work at home in the tiny, rural town. When the war is over, the men who are left will come home, but no one really knows what they will find when they get there.
