A few weeks after they marry, Will has to go to the nearest city for some business and his young bride is left alone at home. Lydia continues to take care of the house and teaches the cowboys to read. One of them, Timothy Wilson has fallen in love with her, but Lydia knows that the boy will never do anything to harm her marriage.

Unfortunately, when Will comes home, an ill wishing neighbor tells him about the boy's feelings and he becomes insanely jealous. Lydia tries to explain to him the real situation, but Will refuses to listen and orders her to stay inside the house and stop talking to the employees. The young woman is extremely hurt and decides to show him that he can trust her.

During a hurricane the herds of cows and horses are in danger and Will is outside trying to bring them to a safer destination. Timothy is always by his side and even saves him from an unexpected encounter with a wolf. In the house, one of the buildings catches fire and Lydia and the few house servants have to stop the fire all by themselves. They are able to arrest the fire's progress, but Lydia faints due to the smoke inhalation. When Will comes home, she is lying in bed unconscious. The doctor comes in the morning and he brings them the news that she is pregnant.
