Moving on after a tragedy can be impossible, especially when you've been dealing with those tragedies for over two years. But it's her senior year, and Harley Anderson is more than ready to do just that, even though the skeletons in her closet can't exactly be hidden.

Enter Mason Daniel, the egotistical, sexy, surfer boy from California. A boy with his own hidden demons, and an even bigger secret agenda. Mason isn't right for Harley. He knows this better than anyone. He's the epitome of a runner, a guy who takes what he can get, only to split a short while later. But he can't deny the emotions that Harley brings out of him, so he's going to break his rules for once.

He should have known what it would lead to...

Two kindred souls, both lost and then found. Will they fail in their search for contentment and happiness, or will they instead find true love when it's least expected?
