Nothing seems to be going right for New York City Homicide Detective Luke Everett. His wife of twenty-two years has left him, he's having problems controlling his temper on the job, and his current case has been stalled for months.

Things change when he's paired up with Deputy U.S. Marshal Eddie Brock, who arrives from L.A. seeking help tracking down a murderer Luke was never able to put in prison.

Eddie seems like Luke's complete opposite in every way: an easygoing smart-ass for whom indulging in life's pleasures—including men—takes top priority. But when their search takes them undercover at a gay club, Luke discovers first impressions can't always be trusted, and he finds himself falling for Eddie despite every instinct of his conventional cop persona telling him otherwise.

This 22,000-word romance novella features mature content, no cliffhanger, and an HFN ending
