IF YOU LOVE THEM LET THEM GO A Nursing Home Dilemma Karen R. Clarke

“IF YOU LOVE THEM LET THEM GO” is a non fiction article about the horrendous family crisis that consumed my family for over eleven years. The problem was the care of my severely disabled father. In June 1992 my highly intelligent father was struck down with a stroke that left him paralyzed down the left side of his body, limited use of his right side and wheelchair bound. Although the stroke did damage a lot of his normal mental abilities he did retain his good sense of humor. In their denial of the severity of my father’s condition my mother and four sisters felt he should be cared for at home by our immediate family members. I disagreed. I felt that if he was to be cared for at home it should be with twenty-four hour nursing care or he should be placed in a nursing home. Thus began the falling apart of my once close-knit family. I feel that there are other families that have gone through or are going through a similar family crisis and that my article maybe of some help to them.
