This novel is about choosing rules for life. Chief Judge Green must decide whether he can reconcile the law with the idealism of his wife, Emily, and whether, because of a youthful mistake, he should resign from the state Supreme Court. His law clerk, Sally Link, must decide whether to accept an offer from a powerful law firm or help the man she loves run a rehabilitation center for alcoholics. The novel raises questions, central to current political debate, about legal education, lawyers' ethics, and the role of the courts.
