Entering into the 21st century, there is a trend of intermixing of races. What was uncommon years ago, is standard procedure today. According to the U.S. Census, there were 311,000 interracial (Black/White) marriages in 1997, 6 times more than there were in 1960. Dating or marrying an individual of the same race does not always equate to happiness or quality of life. This book explores why and will show you how to have a more prosperous relationship.
