Aria has always looked like a little girl. Small and lithe, she is routinely mistaken for a child despite the fact that she's well into her twenties. Aside from looking so young, she is a pretty normal girl. After high school, she went to a community college, though her classes didn't lead anywhere. Now she's looking for some extra money, so she volunteers for a medical study.

Almost immediately, Dr. Cabot can tell that she's going to be perfect for what he has in mind. She is young, sweet, and innocent. Just as importantly, she doesn't have any close connections in the area. She's just a lost little girl.

So he accepts her as his test subject. Dr. Cabot distracts her while she should be reading those contracts and waivers. Even though she doesn't understand what she has in front of her, Aria goes ahead and signs each document. She doesn't realize it yet, but she just gave up control to her doctor. Every decision he makes for her will be legally binding.

From there, his lovely nurse escorts Aria into an exam room. She is stripped and strapped down, touched and poked and prodded. But before she can truly summoned the nerve to resist, the doctor starts the real course of treatment. Aria is subjected to a variety of colors and images. These whirling hues dance before her, relaxing her, making her feel so good and so safe. Not only that, she relaxes into a new state of mind, one where she will do whatever her doctor tells her.

Dr. Cabot has an agenda for this cute little girl. He diapers her, he makes her crawl, and he subjects her to a variety of medical treatments. When she fakes being sick, he checks her with a rectal thermometer. He uses his stethoscope and speculum. And yes, Aria can struggle all she wants, but he's not going to let her go until she is completely cured of her adulthood.

This 30,000 word novella contains: age play, doctor domination, humiliation, invasive medical treatments, hypnosis/mind control, rectal thermometers, diapers, anal stimulation, enemas, and spanking. All characters are consenting adults.
